

Now Hiring Editor-in-Chief for Environmental Health Perspectives

The National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences (NIEHS) is searching for the next Editor-in-Chief of Environmental Health Perspectives (EHP).

EHP is a peer-reviewed, open access, monthly science journal, that publishes a wide range of topics related to the environment and human health. The journal has an impact factor of 7.03, is the second-ranked journal in public, environmental, and occupational health, and is the fourth-ranked journal in environmental sciences. The journal is international in scope and distributed in more than 100 countries. EHP is published monthly by NIEHS, but operates as an independent journal.

Candidates should have a strong background as a research scientist in a field related to the environmental health sciences, as well as substantial editorial experience in the field of scientific publishing. The ideal candidate will have a Ph.D., M.D., or equivalent doctoral degree.

The EHP Editor-in-Chief will focus on the scientific qualities of the journal. An operations manager will oversee production and staff.

Applications will be accepted March 30 – April 17, 2015.
To apply for this job, go to USAJOBS at www.usajobs.gov.

For questions about the position, please contact:

Rick Woychik, Ph.D.
Deputy Director
NIEHS
PO Box 12233
Research Triangle Park, N.C. 27709
Email: rick.woychik@niehs.nih.gov

To learn more about EHP, go to <http://ehp.niehs.nih.gov>.

